A Minute Fish.

The much diminutive vertebrate creature in the world is said to be a small fish caught in a mountain lake in the Luzon region of the Philippines. The largest of the species is less than an inch long, but its smallness may be best gauged by the fact that it takes without loss of them to make a pound. Although so tiny, however, the fish, which is named Minapiran, is an important article of diet among the Philippine natives. Obviously it is too small for any net and is caught in coarse-meshed traps. The fish are preserved in vinegar.

Victor Hugo in his "93" makes Lantenne call a sailor to the quarter deck and decorate him with a medal of honor for bravery in action and then take him forward and have him shot for letting a janyard go loose during the engagement. And when the court at Idaho gets through with orchard as a witness, according to his own confession, he might well be shot or hung for murder, bigamy, robbery and other crimes.

The President of the United States has sent the Panama canal money under way, stirred up the Standard Oil Co., and railroad men guessing, brought out a heated correspondence with one of our best naturalists, and now started in to suppress the New England or link-cut, which is a good thing. If all the abolitionists ever invented for promotion of words a button or link on the back of a man's wrist is the worst. He may have a wife and one or two daughters or sisters to help him get into them, and for a minute the language is good, but when he tries to push them down through a coat sleeve, it begins again, especially if the coat sleeve goes to his wrist before the cut device does. No! In the language of the strenuous Roosevelt, give me a cuff that lacerates my front, and that one man can stun.

Several of the plans and expectations of the industrial committee have failed to produce the desired results, but yet there is hope that new industries and new residents may be brought to us. There is ample room for many more beautiful homes in all parts of the town and all the people who are seeking for places of business are not supplied yet. There are cotton goods manufacturers who are seeking for new places to erect factories, and we have the land, railroad and other transportation facilities which ought to attract our water front is unsurpassed on the New England coast and one of the great ocean lines of transportation is now looking for additional facilities and the town of Rockport, which has not nearly as good a water frontage as we have, is in hopes to land the prize. What we want is a living people who can see the attractions there are in their own home town and talk what we have got.

School Comm. ee.

The school committee held a meeting last Saturday evening. All the members were present. It was voted to introduce the stamp saving system in the schools. Thomas Fitzgibbon was elected janitor of the new school house at East Weymouth at a salary of $500 and Russell Poole janitor of the new school house at Porter salary $250. The resignations of Miss Gay and Miss Bartholomew teachers in the high school were accepted. Miss Marion Wentworth was elected to the vacancy caused by Miss Gay's resignation.

Arrangements for the Woman's Relief Corps Bazaar at Fogg's opera house next Thursday and Friday are completed. The bazaar will be open for sale of useful and fancy articles in the afternoon, and reserved seats for the evening may be obtained at C. D. Harlow's, Weymouth; W. M. Tirrell's, East Weymouth; Elbridge Nash's, South Weymouth; and D. A. Jones, North Weymouth.

The New Weymouth Directory.

The canvass is well along and the men are meeting with the best of success in working for the Weymouth Directory. The live, up-to-date business men appreciate and use the directory. The map that goes with the book is a new one of Weymouth and includes the roads, streets, avenues, squares, etc., shown as they are, with connecting towns. Orders of the canvassers or send to E. A. Jones, Old South Building, Boston.

Too Easy.

Divorces are so easily obtained these days that people imagine any kind of grounds will be sufficient. A St. Louis woman asks a separation merely because her husband insists on chewing tobacco in bed and soiling the clean pillow slips.

A TWO-PIECE SUIT

Is about the most practical warm weather suit ever devised. No vest, no suspenders! For coolness, freedom and comfort it is unequalled. We make stylish two-piece suits from all the high-grade flannels and also from other light weight fabrics. Workmanship of the best, and prices very reasonable. Do not forget to give us a call. Place your order now, so that when hot weather does come you will not have to wait.

Jordan-White.

Thus far the season has been bad for June roses and they are coming along quite slowly, but that has not interfered much with the June wedding events, and the season opened with a very pretty affair in the Universal church at Weymouth Wednesday night.

The contracting parties were Edward Stuart Jordan, son of Mr. and Mrs. E. W. Jordan, and Georgianna Louise White, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. George L. White, all of Weymouth.

The marriage ceremony was performed by Rev. Melvin S. Nash and the double ring and pledge were used. The bride's dress was a white silk trimmed with Chantilly lace and a bertha, hand embroidered with a wild rose design by the bride's aunt, Mrs. Abbie West of Dorchester. The bride also wore the usual tulle veil with lines of the valley and a cameo brooch belonging to her grandmother, Mrs. George W. White.

The bridesmaids were Miss Eva Peterson of North Abington and Miss Helen West of Dorchester, and the bridesmaids wore white silk dresses trimmed with white lace, and carried pink roses. The best man was Warren Fellows of Ipswich. The ushers were Walter West of Dorchester, Melville Cate of Weymouth, Harry and George Jordan, son of Mr. and Mrs. E. W. Jordan, and the bridesmaids were white and the bridesmaids were white and the bridesmaids were white.

The gift of the groom to the bride was a necklace of amethysts and pearls; to the best man and ushers he gave gold scarf pins set with pearls, and to the ring bearer a tiny gold banding. The bride's gift to the bridesmaids was a ring set with their birthstones, and the flower girl received from the same source a ring with pearl settings.

The chapel, like the auditorium, was tastefully decorated in green and white, and here the reception was held beneath a floral arch, and the newly wedded couple were assisted in the reception by their parents.

Misses Louise Cowing, Louise Hunt, Elizabeth Hall and Alice Nash of Weymouth, Irene Fellows of Ipswich, and Elizabeth Orcutt of North Abington were in charge of tables from which a dainty lunch was served.

After a brief wedding trip, Mr. and Mrs. Jordan will make their home for the summer at Hayside, North Weymouth.

Susannah Tuf's Chapter, D. A. R.

The annual meeting of Susannah Tuf's Chapter, D. A. R., was held with Miss George Johnson at her home, 40 Clay street, Weymouth, Monday, May 27. This being the last meeting until September, a large number were present. The reports of secretary and treasurer were read; also the recent activity report of the work of the chapter for the year. These reports were very satisfactory, especially the treasurer's, showing the chapter to be in good financial condition.

The following officers were elected to office for the year 1907: Regent, Mrs. A. B. Howland; 1st vice-regent, Mrs. Frank O. Sterling; 2d vice-regent, Mrs. Frank O. Sterling; secretary, Miss Sarah A. White; assistant secretary, Mrs. Frederick Cate; treasurer, Miss Lucy M. Crane; registrar, Mrs. C. T. Crane; historian, Mrs. Orlin B. Bates; executive committee, Miss Anna E. Hayward, Mrs. Emma A. Doane, Mrs. Harriet B. Voorhees.

After the business hour, refreshments were served by the hostesses. All voted that a delightful afternoon had been spent, notwithstanding the rain and cold.

Mrs. John C. Stevens.

On Tuesday, May 28, after an alarming illness of but a few hours, Mrs. Stevens passed away. A gentle, retiring, home-loving wife and mother, she was one in whom the unfortunate and the suffering freely confided. In her abounding sympathy and charity she found excuses for all their failings and she did her best to help them. To her neighbors and friends, who called upon her, she was a genial and cheerful hostess, but her uncertain health would not have allowed her to be much in society, even if her inclinations had so permitted. She was the daughter of Tristram C. and Sarah A. Talbot of Newburyport and was the eldest surviving of their six children. At the early age of nineteen years she was married to Mr. Alexander McGregor of Haverhill, but five years later was a widow with two children, Charles Alexander and Alice Lillian. Nine years afterward she married Mr. John C. Stevens of Newburyport and for about twenty-seven years has lived in Weymouth. She is survived by Mr. Stevens, the children of her first husband, and by Alexander, Gordon and Janet, the three children of her son, Charles Alexander McGregor.

REYNOLDS POST NO. 58. G. A. R.

General Order No. 2.

To complete the duties of Memorial day the Commander desires to publish that the comrades and all who in any way assisted in the various services of the occasion for their hearty co-operation in carrying out the program as set forth in General Order No. 1.

The Commander appreciates the fact that much sacrifice of valuable time was made by many comrades to attend the public school services which under a new regulation were carried out with greater satisfaction to all than ever before.

The attendance at Divine service on Sunday, the 30th, did credit to the various patriotic societies participating, by the large numbers of comrades and numbers attending, and our thanks are due and are hereby tendered the Rev. Mr. Alford for his able and inspiring discourse on that occasion and to the choir and those who made the church so attractive by their decorations.

The various services of Memorial day, while not as yet entirely satisfactory in detail, were, notwithstanding, loyally carried out to completion.

The Commander, in behalf of the Post, hereby extends to the superintendent of schools and the teachers who so kindly assisted him, and to the scholars who participated in the services at the cemeteries hearty thanks for the same. Also to Master Gregory of the High School for the earnest and faithful rendering in three cemeteries of "Lincoln's Gettysburg Address." It was a service especially appropriate and in obedience to general orders from headquarters.

The thanks of the comrades are due and hereby given to Father Toland for his kind and earnest address at St. Francis Xavier cemetery which appealed to the noblest instincts of American manhood. We do not forget the kindly service and labor of our own W. R. C. (God bless them) for their part in making the day so pleasant and so profitable to all.

Also the songs of Veterans for their escort and helpful work. We appreciate the fact that we, your sons, have so departed ourselves in the past that you are glad to lend your help and serve us on this day. Nor do we fail to remember the larger and nobler part of ourselves by the Ladies' Auxiliary to our Sons, and our own Daughters' organization in preparing the flowers in such profusion for the various cemeteries. Never was the work better done, considering the peculiar drawbacks of season and weather. The happy thought of planning on each Veterans' breast the little buttonhole was especially pleasing.

To Comrades Whitcomb and Vining, the able committee in charge of the musical part of the program, we extend our hearty thanks and thank them for their association with them on that occasion, and who rendered the familiar songs with such satisfaction to all.

The Commander directs that a letter of appreciation and thanks be prepared and sent under seal of the Post to the orator of the day, "Neighbor John" for the clear and forceful utterances of the hour to which we listened with such pleasure.

Nor can we fail to mention our "Sons of the Stars," Comrade Andy Bicknell, for his ready response to our call, and led us in showing how the "Old Boys" can yet sing. While deprived of the blessing of sight, he yet retains the gift of song, and what is better, is willing to sing when the call comes and we make himself the joy of his fellow comrades.

To each and every one who in any way helped make the day a success, the Commander extends the grateful acknowledgments of the Post.

The Adjutant will see that a copy of this order is published in the local paper.

WALTER TUNNEY, Commander.

JOHN W. BATES, Adjutant.

Daughters of Veterans.

There are so many different organizations connected with the historic events of the country that it is not strange if one of them gets overlooked once in a while and that was the case in our report of Memorial exercises last week in omitting to mention the Ladies' Auxiliary to our Sons, which had on their white next light badges on which was inscribed "My Father was a Soldier."

This organization, which must be composed of lineal descendants of men who were "Soldiers" in the Civil war, is comparatively new, the Weymouth branch having been organized barely six months, but for a child of that age it is remarkably strong and did itself particular credit last week and came well to the front with Miss Janie Maynard as its president and Miss J. Florence Loring, chief of staff.

At East Weymouth they furnished 148 baskets and 74 pot plants for the soldiers graves at Fairmount cemetery and were factors in many other events of the day. When the line was formed at Little Weymouth they placed upon the breast of every one in the line a next light buttonhole bouquet, and at the banquet did efficient work in catering to the appetites of the two hundred and more men and women gathered at the tables.

Union Literary Circle.

The Union Literary circle of Weymouth and East Braintree, which is fast nearing its twenty-fifth anniversary, held its final entertainment for the season of 1906 and 1907 on Tuesday evening, May 28, in the parlors of the Union Congregational church.

This last meeting of the season is designated as guest night and each member invites a guest to enjoy the program. The committee appointed to have charge that evening was Charles E. Dexter, Frank B. Cressney and Dr. A. F. Ewell.

The evening's program was opened by an informal address of welcome by president William Hyde who spoke in a pleasing manner. Next followed the roll call which was answered by the many members present, the general response being a quotation or original remark. Miss Jessie McGregor read her witty warty an original poem entitled "The Biting Committee of Two." The secretary, Mrs. Helen Dexter, read a report of the last meeting. Thomas A. Watson gave four well rendered readings. Rev. Frank B. Cressney read an original poem which had something bright to say of each of the members. The music for the evening was furnished by John H. Guttersen, pianist; Charles Leavitt, violinist; and Mrs. Helen P. Dexter who sang two songs accompanied by Mr. Guttersen and Mr. Leavitt.

After a short recess the company adjourned to the banquet room where there was an abundance of ice cream and cake served by Fred Tarbox and Bessie Wright. Printed programs of next season's work were passed to the various members during the evening and it is to be hoped that as much mutual pleasure and gain may be derived from the coming season as in the past.

JOHN D. COBB, Registrar.

HIGH SCHOOL NOTES.

James E. and Joseph J. Conditree '05, and Thomas Hennessy '06, have completed their first year's work at the Tufts Medical School, Boston.

The base ball game to have been played with the Milton high team at Milton Monday had to be postponed on account of rain.

Walter Whelan '05 has finished his first year at the Harvard dental school.

The base ball team went to Hingham Tuesday afternoon and played their first game of the season, the score being 2 to 1. Neither side could bat to any great extent, but a timely run after an error scored one run for Hingham and their other was secured by a wild throw, and a misunderstanding in regard to ground rules. Weymouth scored its only run by a wild throw after a hit and a stolen base by Conroy.

Hingham - 1 0 0 0 1 0 0 0 2

THE OSAGE MONSTER.

How a Steamboat Whistle Affected Missouri Pioneers.

STORY OF A HISTORIC HUNT.

Armed for the Fray, the Frightened but Determined Old Settlers Bought the Famous Deast With the Fearful, Searing Voice.

The first steamboat that ever turned her prow against the muddy Osage waters was the Flora Jones in the spring of 1841. There was no commercial club in those days to stimulate river traffic, no telephone or telegraph to herald to the hardy pioneers the approach of the boat—only the monthly shrill screech of a steamboat whistle, enough to blanch the cheek of the simple minded folk who had lived far from the world's progress.

The little boat, in Bates county, history records the fact that when the Flora Jones puffed her way along the St. Clair county shore and the wall of her stern was tossed back and forth by the limestone bluffs many of the old settlers were not only frightened but out of their boots, and even out of their homes. Matthew Arbuckle, a pioneer, tradition tells us, was playing in his field about a mile from the river, when the whistle of that whistle struck his ear. He whistled his horse from the plow, managed to get on his back and with terror, terror, he fled. In one hour he was at Linnville, fifteen miles distant, the horse white with foam, the rider white with terror. He had barely strength to tell of "an awful noise" from which he had made his escape. He had not seen the fearful beast, he confessed, but he had heard its screech, by which he knew it to be a monster of terrible proportions.

Arbuckle's neighbors were brave and, though much disturbed by his account, determined upon a campaign of extermination. They had defended their homes against Indians, and they reasoned that no wild animal, however ferocious, could withstand their rifles. They gathered at Uncle John Whiteley's. He had seen service under Jackson at New Orleans. His home was up the tortuous stream from Arbuckle's farm.

The next morning a crowd of hardy pioneers, with guns and dogs, were ready at Uncle John's. The brilliant band numbered among its members Uncle John Whiteley, James Breckenridge, Benjamin Morris, William H. H. Hamilton, Morris, Benjamin Burch, William Barker, Frank Roark, Benjamin Seark, Snowden Morris and Matthew Arbuckle.

The crowd agreed that there should be undertaken a quest for the mysterious monster threatening their homes and families.

Just before the signal to start was given Mattie, a daughter of Whiteley's, went down to the river, 300 yards distant, for water. In her absence the Flora Jones, which had tied up for the night at a bend in the river below, again sounded the terror inspiring whistle.

"Charge, men!" roared Whiteley, seizing his gun. "Matt went to the river for water, and I reckon she's dead afore now."

The crowd rushed to the river, determined to rescue the girl if she were not alive. But Matt, it is hardly necessary to state, was not on the way. She was headed homeward, her hair streaming behind and her face blanched with fear.

With the weapons ready for instant action, the determined hunters continued riverward. The crew of the Flora Jones, proud of her whistle, continued to sound it at frequent intervals, and its reverberations rang from bluff to bluff unceasingly. Each fresh blast added to the uneasiness of the band of hunters. Frequent councils were held. The failure of the dogs to take the scent nerved them.

The hunters scoured the Osage bluffs to all sides. Breckenridge lost faith in his hounds and declared that he would go to St. Louis for Newfoundlanders. Meanwhile the Flora Jones had proceeded to the river to Harmony, and her whistle was no longer heard. As night came on a storm broke, and the hunters took refuge in a cave.

With the return of dawn there began again the hideous wail of the mysterious monster. The Flora Jones was making an early start on her return trip down the river. Noisy and nearer sounded the whistle, until the hunters, who had lurked hastily from their cave, could distinguish a puffing and blowing supposed to be the snorts of the advancing foe.

The moment of decisive action seemed at hand. The hunters rushed to the river bank. Each selected a tree to stand behind and looked to the priming of his gun.

An instant later the Flora Jones rounded a bend and loomed into view. Upon her deck was a gay crowd of passengers watching the early sunrise flooding the water with rosy light. Uncle John Whiteley, Jimmy Breckenridge and their band of heroes were too astonished to answer the friendly hail as the boat swept down to the next bend, her whistle mocking their fears.

Little was said as the hunters tracked homeward. Instantaneously each grasped his rifle. And so ended the historic hunt for the monster of the Osage valley—Kansas City Star.

There is no open door to the temple of success. Every one makes his own door, which closes behind him to all others.—Mabel.

It had been a busy day at General Alton's headquarters. Indeed, there were all sorts of things in the air, the falling of the land No. 10, and the later occupation by General Pope of Corinth.

In the heart of the little city of Jackson, Tenn., General Alton had established his headquarters. At his desk here, long after tea had been served, his lights gave evidence that when the men in the ranks are asleep, money is still the order of the day in command.

An orderly noisily entered the room where General Alton was at his desk. Silently he saluted and waited for some sign of recognition. He had to wait some minutes before General Alton, without looking up from his letters, said, "Well, orderly?"

"Colonel Curtis presents his compliments to General Alton, begs to report matters of importance and asks an immediate interview."

The general laid down his pen. "Show him in, orderly."

As the colonel entered General Alton rose, and the two grave faces looked questioningly at each other. In those days "matters of importance" generally stood for disaster and necessity for quick action.

"General Alton," the crisp voice of Colonel Curtis began, "a prisoner, a spy, has been arrested attempting to pass the lines. In the search in his shoes were found several complete and thorough drawings of the strengthened fortifications of Corinth and papers bearing information on supplies, condition of men, etc."

The general turned to the speaker a face full of interest. "That's bad, Colonel Curtis, very bad. Tell me the details of the personality of the prisoner."

"I did not see him until the papers had been discovered and the evidence of his being a spy established. He is a mere boy, not more than twenty years old, I am sure. He has been a blood-red of I am convinced—and good blood—in his veins. I think his name is General Alton, of Tennessee. His accent indicates that."

"You ordered the search?"

"No, Captain Lawton did."

"The specifications and papers were found in his shoes?"

"Yes, general, hidden between a false sole."

General Alton looked gravely straight in front of him. He was thinking deeply. Colonel Curtis was no sensationist, but he had suggested a serious charge in this interview.

The specifications and detail of an important supply point with the possession of the Union forces, under guard and strict martial law, were now in the hands of this spy of the enemy."

18000 men, women and children went to work on a five cent raise in the mills
of Lawrence, Chippewa and Augusta, Me.
on Monday and this will help to meet the
twenty per cent raise in meat foods.

With frosts killing the blossoms, bugs
eating the vines, and a cranberry train
combining the New England Cranberry
Sales Co., the New Jersey and Wisconsin
Sales Co., it begins to look as though the National bird would have to go without cranberry sauce on Thanksgiving day.

From the dawn of time the number of days in the calendar year have been the same as the sun, moon and stars which control the days, roll in their regular orbits and are not controlled by political
or other local events and happenings.

With mortal man and nations there is,
however, a different state of affairs and
days are multiplied or reduced according to circumstance, and with the American people the days we celebrate are multiplying
fast and among the new days is "Flag Day" which each year means more and more.

The American flag floats over an increase of nearly 5,000,000 people since a year ago; it floats over enterprises and industries which a year ago were not
dreamed of, and some new and grave difficulties with which we are confronted, but
our flag is still the symbol of our nation.

Today we celebrate the 120 anniversary
of the birth of the flag of the United States. The flag was designed for a nation of 13 colonies, stretched like a belt
along the Atlantic coast, made up of less than three millions of people, with no common traditions or language, drawn together only by common danger from savages within, and oppression from without, which threatened their existence
and liberties. That flag now waves over a great nation extending from the Gulf
of Mexico to the lakes; from the Atlantic
to the Pacific sea; and inhabited by nearly 90 millions of people, who speak a common language.

"Our flag is now in form—the oldest flag of civilized nations. The resolution
by congress for the adoption of the stars
and stripes on June the 14th, 1777, was as follows: 'Resolved that the flag of the United States be 13 stripes, alternate red
and white; that the union be 13 stars,
white in a blue field, representing a new constellation.' The design of this flag is credited to George Washington, and in part was taken from his family coat of arms. Such is the origin of a flag dedicated to the proposition that all men are created free and equal."

Miss Gertrude Frances Beals, daughter
of the late Augustus Beals, and Roy Franklin Vining, son of Mr. and Mrs.
Henry F. Vining, were married on Wednesday evening at 8 o'clock, in the Third Universalist church by the Rev. M. S.
Nash, pastor of that church.

Such a pretty wedding it was. The single ring Episcopal service was used,
the attendant standing throughout the ceremony. The church decorations were in white and green and were very effective. Hemlock was used for a background, white potted plants, lilacs and daisies were used in abundance. The front pews were with bunches of
hemlock and bridal wreath.

To the strains of Lohengrin's Wedding
March, played by Mr. Arthur M. Raymond, the bride party entered the church.
The bride looked dainty and sweet in a beautiful white morgan gown with point and Irish lace trimmings. Her train was fastened with valley lilies.
She carried a large bouquet of the same, daisies, and roses. The bride was attended by her sister, Miss Clara E. Beals, as maid of honor. Her gown was of white silk tulle, over pink, with daisy lace trimmings. She carried a bouquet of bride roses. The bridesmaids were Miss Florence Beals of Weymouth, sister of the bride, and Miss Doris Torrey of North Weymouth, a cousin of the bride. They looked very pretty in white muslins and they carried pink sweet peas. Not the least of importance in the bridal party was the ring bearer, Peter A. Ames of Brookline, nephew of the bride. His suit
was of white and he carried a callia lily
containing the ring.

The groom, dressed in the conventional
black, was attended by Mr. Harry M.
Shute of Salem as best man. The bridesmaids were John Taylor of Weymouth Heights,
Stanley Torrey of North Weymouth,
Chester Burr of Hingham and Clarence Rogers of Boston. They were presented with pearl scarf pins by the groom.

The bride presented the maid of honor and bridesmaids with pearl bar pins. The ring bearer had a gift of a signet ring.
The gift of the groom to the bride was a handsome diamond sunburst, and the bride's gift to the groom a diamond scarf pin.

Directly following the ceremony, a reception was held at the home of the bride, Mrs. Elizabeth Beals Pratt, on Sea Street. The newly-married couple were assisted in receiving by Mrs. Pratt, Mr. and Mrs. Henry Vining, parents of the groom, and the bride's two sisters,
Miss Clara E. Beals and Mrs. George
Ames.

The house was tastefully and beautifully decorated with palms, ferns, hydrangeas, American Beauty roses, pink and mountain thorn. A stringed orchestra
stationed in the library, furnished music
throughout the reception. Salads and ices were served in the dining room.

Guests were present from Lowell,
Salem, Roxbury, Fall River, St. Louis,
and from all the surrounding towns.

At about ten o'clock Mr. and Mrs. Vining started on their wedding tour and showers of confetti, and carrying the
good wishes of all their many friends.
They will spend the summer in Norwell.

While not an immediate resident of East Weymouth, few if any, young men
could have been taken from the activities
of life who will be so deeply mourned
as John F. Hughes who passed away
after but a few hours' illness at his home
in Boston, last Friday.

Mr. Hughes was born in East Weymouth thirty-five years ago and his sterling qualities as boy and man have always commanded the confidence and respect of
those with whom he has been associated.

Fifteen years ago he moved to Boston
and was employed in the police system
and policeman duty and was placed on the reserve force in 1897 and had achieved
distinction in the Chinese section of the fourth division where he had done most efficient service.

Mr. Hughes was not a man to let life
be his leisure or vacation hours, but utilized
them in study and entered the Evening
Law school of the Boston Y. M. C. A.
where for four years he studied hard and
while his nights were waiting for him, he was called to receive the diploma which
only the Great Master of All can deliver.

His removal cast a gloom over the graduating class and the following actions
taken by them are a testimonial of his worth.

Whereas, John Hughes, our follow-
member of the class of 1907, Y. M. C. A.
Evening Law school, has been suddenly
taken from our earthly activities to the life beyond;

Resolved, That the class of 1907, Y. M. C. A.
Evening Law school, at a special meeting called by its president
and its members, do hereby express their sorrow for the loss of a friend and a fellow student, and do hereby resolve to pass the same on to the class of 1908.

The ball team went to Rockland yesterday afternoon and won its last game of the season by defeating the Rockland
high nine 6 to 5. The Weymouth boys played fine ball with one lining excepted
the eighth, in which 4 runs were made.
By Rockland on not a single base hit.

The Super pitching of Heffernan, as well as his fielding, finally brought Weymouth
out of the hole safely. O'Dowd, Conroy
and Doble batted well for Weymouth.
Some of the players who played in the style. This game adds to the list of victories, making it ten for the season, with only one defeat, and that by Hingham.

This is the best record ever made by a Weymouth high nine. Capt. O'Dowd leads the team in hitting, his mark being 35; for the eleven games played, which is an exceptional average.

The score: 1 2 3 4 5 6 7 8 9
Weymouth 1 0 0 1 0 0 0 0 0

SOUTH WEYMOUTH.
—Frances E. Jackson, at one time a resident of this place, and well known
for her horse racing, is going to attempt to break a record of 2,000 miles on horseback, from San Antonio, N. M., to Brooklyn, Mr. Jackson will carry the regular cowboy equipments weighing,
all told, about 250 lbs. His little mare, named "Crazy Kid," who won a ponky little list at the kidnap and
barnstorm and would have crawled off
the back of the horse, is the big feature of the trip.

"I didn't steal the kid, God bless
her!" said the kidnap. "I'm a sort of a kidnap, and I was driven yesterday 'n' tryin' to forget. An when I got into the battery park the little girl run to me and said, 'Papa!'
An' I said, 'You know, sixteen years ago I had a kid just like that, before
my mother run away from me and I took the little girl along. So we was sittin' on the bench, talkin' and I was her mother and I got from a dog
when all these people came runnin' up,
an' they pinched me."

"You're no kidnap," said the judge,
with decision. "Go downstairs for a day and straighten up." As the longshoreman turned he addressed the motherly friend.

"These, mam, can I kiss the kid—
just once?"—New York City. Cincinnati

Firemen's Relief.
The members of the Weymouth Firemen's Relief Association paid a tribute to their departed comrades on Sunday.

In the morning hours, details in different villages visited the graves of those who have gone before and strewed them
with choice floral offerings. At nine o'clock
the organization assembled at Nash's
corner and with music from the South Weymouth Fire and Dram Corps marched to Mt. Hope cemetery where other graves
were decorated after which the line was reformed and marched to the Porter
church and listened to an able address by the pastor and select music by the choir.

Tired of Being a Mascot.
"Do I know where you can find a
good drummer?" said the smartly
dressed young man in a very firm
voice as he best friend looked anxiously
to him for advice. "Yes, I do, but I never tell you. Now, don't look so injured. She is my own drummer, and I would not give her name or address to anybody for anything. For all my annual pin money, I've had a few experiences in that line which have taught me some lessons. I had a woman who came once a week to do
extra housework for me, and she was a treasure to me, but she was so overworked she came regularly for three years. One day she told me she needed one or two more pieces, so she could put in all her time and just about then a friend of mine was looking for extra help, so I recommended Dinah. I never saw Dinah again, but she was a mascot. I'm looking for a mascot of my own."—New York Sun.

Willie's birthday is almost here,
and he is a little boy now.
But mother says: "I have no time
A birthday cake to make."
To disappoint him would be bad,
A boy just loves such things.
He wants a cake, the best you make,
For Willie's next birthday.

Now Willie tells you what to do,
Just call on him and say,
"I want a cake, the best you make,
For Willie's next birthday."
He'll make one that will please him so
And you will say, "I'm really glad
To please the dear sweet boy."
And when dear Willie makes that cake
So lovely, disappear.

A Miser's Little Joke.

(Copyright, 1908, by M. McKoon.)
Henry Tweed was a miser. There was only one saving clause in the man's whole life. His word was as good as his bond. He exacted the last penny, but he also paid the last. At twenty years of age he was lending money and buying real estate. At the same time he was living on raw vegetables and wearing clothing begged
from the streets. It is not on record that any man ever tested him in a trade of any sort. When his father died, Henry inherited a fortune of fifty thousand dollars. He was generally honest, but he had left a quarter of a million dollars. He had never given a human being a cent. While he was a miser, he was not quarrelsome, but he had been
with men, he had been miserly
and hard hearted and exacting. Very little could be said in his favor and a great deal against him. One of the things remembered against him in his own town was that of dispossessing a man who had borrowed money of him
and then failed through no fault of his own. He was ill when Tweed ordered
the law to carry him out of the house.
He always claimed that he was right
in this, though he realized that all
others berated him for his filthy heart.
After his death it was found that he had made restitution. He had left all his property to the man who had called him a Shylock and a scoundrel. He had appointed as his executor a man who had been most outspoke
against him.
The will was found, admitted to probate, and the executors began to carry it out. The heir had been put into possession when a claim claiming to be a cousin of Tweed appeared and put in a claim. He had been the son of the other. This also appeared different men as executors. The law says that the last will stands. This will upset the will. The heir had stood for long. A woman who easily proved that she was a cousin came from a distant state and exhibited a will which had been her father's legatee. This was dated two weeks later than the second. It was perfectly legal, and again there was a change of executors. Things had seemed to move under the new will when a flood of relatives appeared. There were uncles and aunts and cousins
and, and all had a will.
It transpired that one lawyer had
drawn up all the wills as a sort of job.
The heirs had been put into possession, and he had given Tweed a whole sale rate. Each one down to the last had a later date than the other and proved different facts. The heirs or relatives had known Tweed in life
or cared about him in the slightest,
and he stated to the lawyer that he wanted revenge on the whole crowd.
There was bitter feeling among the heirs and much loud talk about lawsuits to break the will, but the final result was to give each one a certain sum and thus brought about peace. In due time he entered into his own and began to enjoy himself.
The newspapers had got tired of publishing columns about the eccentric Henry Tweed, and people who knew
of his past life had been told that
when there was a new development.
A lawyer who had not before been mentioned in connection with the case
came forward with a paper signed witnessed reading that the last and true will had been concealed and that it named a different legatee from any of the others. Whoever was in possession when this paper was presented
should remain so until the will mentioned should be found.
All the old excitement was at once revived. The heirs under the other will returned and began searching,
and at one time over 100 persons were hunting in every likely spot for the paper. The man in possession had the house taken to pieces and every likely
place and thickets, and for a month
scarcely any other work was done in that part of the county. If it hadn't been for old Granny Benson, the will might never have been found. She was old and light headed, and no one gave her any attention. She heard the talk all around her, but had not time to say for some weeks. Then a storekeeper asked her in a half humorous way where she supposed the paper had been hidden, and she said:
"Why, we all know that Henry
bought a coffin at a bargain five years
before he died and kept it in the house. I don't know if it is there, but he had a pocket in the coffin and put
the paper in it."
The men who had laid out the body
and put it in its coffin were spoken to
and they said they had made no search for a paper. The law was appealed to and the body exhumed, and the will
was found in a pocket in the coffin,
carefully wrapped in oiled skin. There was tremendous excitement for an hour. No one could say who would be the final legatee. Then the tremendous excitement was followed by tremendous indignation. There was a born fool in the town named Oscar Davis, who had a legal guardian. The young man was twenty years old and a general butt of ridicule. To him Henry Tweed had left every dollar of his fortune. In the will the miser explained that the fool was the only one
he knew who had not at some time
abused him. M. QUINN

ADAM'S FIRST WIFE.

The Fendliche Lithth Was a Complete Matrimonial Failure.
Whether Lithth was one of the female creations of chapter 1 or a demon
or something between the two, she
was, considered matrimonially, a complete failure. She was expelled after living with Adam for 20 years and
subsequently became the wife of Satan,
by whom she was the mother of the Jims, so familiar in Persian fairy lore.
The emphatic remark of Adam when he first saw Eve, "This is now bone of my bone and flesh of my flesh,"
makes it, it is suggested, a comparison between Eve and the beautiful but fendliche Lithth not complimentary to
the latter, while the references on the birth of Seth to him as Adam's son
"in his own likeness, after his image,"
conveys a painful hint of the uncanny
offspring born to Adam and Lithth.
Perhaps in revenge for this Lithth-
the name occurs translated "night
visitor" in her name, exactly because
the sworn foe of little children, whom she was wont to strangle with one of her
glorious golden hands unless the watchfulness of their mothers drove her away. It has indeed been gravely suggested by an etymologist greatly daring that our word "hilly" is simply a corruption of "Lithth," (Lithth
amounts which mothers and nurses
would crouch over the cradles or write
on the doorstep.—St. James' Gazette.

A Business Visit.

By ALICE LOUISE LEE.

Copyright, 1906, by Alice Louise Lee.

It is thirty-five years of unmarried life that Elizabeth Fairchild has lived. She is a woman of the old-fashioned "old maid" type. Elizabeth Fairchild could read her title clear, but of those other attributes supposed to mark an advanced state of single blessedness she possessed none.

"She was sunny of disposition and cheerful in the extreme of life. Within her bubbled a living spring of contentment which filled her deep eyes with happiness and made the smiles play about her lips as she worked in her little studio or wandered among the fields and woods back of High lands.

By the little town where—where marriage was considered the early duty of the individual—she was regarded with great curiosity, and many were the speculations as to her probable "chances" during those years, when, as a student and teacher, she had been absent from home.

Living twenty years of the attitude of her fellow citizens, her heart sank when a letter from Stanley Callaman briefly and abruptly announced that he would arrive at the Highlands the evening of Sept. 8 in order to discuss with her new designs for the new some decorated china he had ordered.

There was no hotel in the village, and she realized the painfulness of entertaining any man who was single and advanced in age without range of the eyes of Mrs. Bissell watching behind her blinds twenty feet from the east porch of Mrs. Cavendish, twenty feet from the west bay window; of Mrs. Nash, just across the way, and of Mrs. Brown, the self-conscious village wife, traveling past the front porch.

"Why, mother," exclaimed Elizabeth, half laughing, half frowning, "Highlands will have me engaged to him within an hour after his arrival."

"What do you care?" returned Mrs. Fairchild, who was white haired, but far loving still. "I'd like to see Lem Brown get his deserts for once."

"The probabilities are," Elizabeth told herself sternly as she set her face to the studio in order to finish the eighth, "that Mr. Callaman will see nothing and hear nothing which will betray the Highlands' matrimonial sentiments, and I can certainly expect the post comments for the sake of order."

Whereupon she sang eagerly and domed a becoming white dress and stylish black hat without at all realizing what a trim and attractive china decorator Mr. Callaman was destined to become at the little country station.

Her acquaintance with him was brief and confined to an exchange of letters on the subject of painted china. A mutual acquaintance had induced him to call on her, and she had been the evening one of the order—she was sewing on the back of a chair and was very old-fashioned for a bachelor.

The train was just pulling in when she arrived at the station, and the first unwelcome sight which met her eyes was Lem Brown, lounging on the platform, hands in pockets, his voice soaring above the clanking of the wheels.

Presently his voice ceased, and his other hand turned toward a man with a suit case who was coming toward him. Elizabeth's eyes followed him, and she saw her own husband, Stanley Callaman, coming toward her. He was a man of the old-fashioned "old maid" type. Elizabeth Fairchild could read her title clear, but of those other attributes supposed to mark an advanced state of single blessedness she possessed none.

of her head. "You had the plot all laid out," she said, "and you were carrying it out at the rate of half a mile a minute."

There was an instant's silence, during which Elizabeth, leaning over her side of the rock, examined some moss attentively. But only for a moment. The instant's silence was broken by the situation was taking possession of her. A faint sound of laughter reached the foot of the trunk. It came like a spark in a powder magazine, and with a burst all the laughter which Callaman had been repressing rang forth.

They laughed until the tears came. Then, firmly interrupted, did he care for a continuance of broken design around the plotter?

The task was not an easy one that Elizabeth had set for herself, and it was a weary head that she laid on her pillow that night. "I hope I shall not be here," she thought, "but I may keep him in the studio and out of the reach of remarks." But fortune seemed at odds with her, for the morning dawned faithfully clear.

After breakfast, when she would have led the way to the studio, Callaman ignored her lead and with "What a glorious out of doors this morning," he went out on the porch. With a contraction of the heart Elizabeth followed and sat down facing the battery of Mrs. Bissell's green blinds, the slats of which were immediately moved gently to permit of reconnaissance of Mrs. Bissell's eyes.

With general firmness Elizabeth began again on the subject of painted china. "Mrs. Bissell said she is delighted with your work," she said, "and she is just across the way, and of Mrs. Brown, the self-conscious village wife, traveling past the front porch."

"Why, mother," exclaimed Elizabeth, half laughing, half frowning, "Highlands will have me engaged to him within an hour after his arrival."

STONEMAN JACKSON

Stories of the Intrepid Confederate Commander.

WHEN HE BLUSHED AND FLED

His Retreat in Dismay From an Army of Admiring Women—The Only Man Who Could Put the General to Sleep. His Heroic Reply to Lee.

Among many other incidents in the career of General Stoneman Jackson, a writer in the Standard Magazine tells of an occasion when the intrepid commander was entirely routed by the enemy—an army of admiring women who clamored about him to secure buttons from his coat, locks of hair or other souvenirs. He was backed, thrusting, away he declared, "Really, ladies, this is the first time I was ever surrounded by the enemy." And in confusion and dismay he made good his retreat. Of this story, which is full of the general we quote a few lines.

He was never an ornamental soldier, being roughly clad and so plain as to excite no notice from the ladies. He was, however, a man of great strength and courage. He and his staff were once compelled to ride through a field of mud. The general rushed out in great haste, leaving the name of the leader that he might report him.

"My name is Jackson," replied the general.

"What Jackson?" asked the irate farmer.

"General Jackson,"

"You don't mean to tell me that you are the famous Stoneman Jackson?" the farmer stammered.

"That's what they call me."

The farmer took off his hat with great reverence and said: "General Jackson, ride over my whole field. Do what you like with it, sir."

He was a man of unusual religious devotion, but would always go to sleep in church. Perhaps it was because the church service was the only thing he could depend upon to go right along and not keep awake to watch it. His friends said that it was because of weakness resulting from his exertions in the military way. When he was teaching at the institute he was ill, and all efforts failed to secure for him a night's rest. One of his friends in a letter suggested that the Rev. Dr. White be called in, as he was the only one who was ever able to put Jackson to sleep. In spite of this, however, the general, in his famous parishioner were fast friends to the end.

His men said of him that he always started at daylight, except when he was teaching at the institute. The object of his movements gave his division the name of "Jackson's foot cavalry." One of his men said: "I have never seen a man who could sleep so soundly as General Jackson."

"Moses took forty years to get the Israelites through the wilderness, with manna furnished all the way, but Old Stoneman took only three days to get through on half rations in three days at the most."

Military leaders have usually appreciated the value of sleep. Stoneman was no exception. He was a man of great strength and courage. He and his staff were once compelled to ride through a field of mud. The general rushed out in great haste, leaving the name of the leader that he might report him.

—There is a great loss without some small gain. The shrubs and plants are sending forth flowers of a fuller and more perfect beauty just because of their delay. Particularly beautiful are the shrubs about Columbian square, by the library and on Bayview green, the triangular green named last year during Old Home Week for Rev. James Bayley, the first pastor of the first church of South Weymouth located on that very spot.

—The South Weymouth hall team played the Hyde Park last Saturday afternoon. A close struggle terminated in a score of 7—6 in favor of the home team. The batteries were Crowley and Spillane, Drinkwater and Luther Lord and Drinkwater did some batting. Reddy fielding was excellent. Savory who has made such an enviable record at Holy Cross this season, will resume his former position on the team.

—Last Friday afternoon Mrs. Henry B. Reed was again hostess of a very enjoyable "Missionary Tea," the fourteenth tea to which Mrs. Reed has yearly welcomed the members of the missionary society connected with the Union church. As this was a regular meeting, in fact the final meeting of the season, the secretary's report was read and approved, and a brief address given by Mrs. Irville Waterman, president of the society.

—Mrs. Reed then introduced as speaker of the afternoon, Mrs. Lamson, editor of the magazine "Life and Light," published by the Woman's Board of Missions. After the address refreshments were served and a social hour enjoyed.

POINTED PARAGRAPHS.

So many people consider a wish an ambition.

One way to make something out of nothing is to start a fight about it.

To every man comes a time when he wishes he was as smart as he used to believe he was.

As a rule, it is easier to help a man and make him a friend than it is to injure him and make him an enemy.

Every young man could wear a hero medal if the commission would take his best estimate of his strength and courage.

If you don't laugh at a man's joke, he says you have no sense of humor. It never occurs to him that he lacks the sense of humor.

The loafer will always tell you there isn't much opportunity for a man in this town. Still there are two or three hours in a day here, as elsewhere— Atchison Globe.

Pretty Feet Always Painful.

Shoes rarely, if ever, fit them; hence they carry their possessors haltingly, and too often they must direct themselves toward the chiropodist's. The high arch, instead, the pretty foot's essential quality, is yet in a way a deformity, for it causes an abnormal tightness of the tendon governing the toes, and the toes in consequence all turn under a little, as though trying to grasp something. Turning under, the joints stand out prominently, just as the knuckles stand out when the fingers are closed, and the bones of the shoe rubs and irritates these prominent joints, and the pretty foot's pretty owner pays the penalty in many a smart, in many a jumping pain—New Orleans Times-Democrat.

No Stage Murders in Turkey.

On one point the Turkish censor of the drama is inflexible—there shall be no murder committed on the stage. This is in order to prevent corruption by evil example. Consequently the dramatic effect of many plays is somewhat marred by the manner in which principals destined to be murdered are rushed off the stage and after receiving the fatal thrust out of sight of the audience, stagger back from the wings to sing their death songs.

Quite a Different Thing.

Clara—Father, George says he isn't half good enough to be my husband. Father—It's! He talked to me as if he was quite good enough to have me for a father-in-law.—Stray Stories.

Weymouth Historical Society.

Three notable discourses have been recently presented to this society.

The first of these is a sermon, in the handwriting of its author, the Rev. Peter Thacher, then pastor of the Old North church in Weymouth, and dated A. D. 1708. This was given by Mrs. Margaret T. W. Merrill of Portland, Maine.

The second is a "Valedictory Discourse in two parts" preached by the Rev. Jacob Norton on July 4, 1824.

The third is an "Oration on the Fiftieth Anniversary of American Independence" by Josiah Bent, Jr., pastor of the same church—as was also Mr. Norton.

The last two are the gift of Mr. Francis H. Tilden of Weymouth.

Methodist Episcopal Church Notes.

Next Sunday evening at 7.30 o'clock a union temperance meeting will be held in the vestry of this church. Mrs. Helen G. Rice, National Supt. of Loyal Temperance Leagues, will be the speaker. There will be special singing. The meeting is under the auspices of the local W. C. T. U.

Why Willie Wants a Wedding

We are going to have a wedding
At our house sometime in June;
And we're going to have refreshments
Sometime in the afternoon.

And I am going to keep my eyes
On the boxes of wedding cake;
For sister Annie told me that They would be of Whitcomb's make.

Now Whitcomb makes the finest
cakes
That ever I have eaten;
And I will bet his wedding cake
Has never yet been beaten.

And really I don't care how soon
Sister's wedding day may come;
For all I want is wedding cake
And she's sure to give me some.

WILLIE—Whitcomb's Friend,

Odd Fellows' Memorial.

Crecent Lodge No. 82, Willey Lodge No. 21, Standard Rebekah Lodge No. 98, Abigail Adams Rebekah Lodge No. 90, and Wompatuck Encampment No. 18, I. O. O. F., will join in a memorial service to be held at the Old North church, Weymouth Heights, next Sunday evening at 7 o'clock. Other Lodges invited are Mt. Wollaston No. 80, John Hancock No. 224, and Puritan No. 179.

The sermon will be by Rev. E. J. Yaeger of the Old North church; Neologues by Past Grand P. J. Hunt of Crescent Lodge.

Lions Didn't Hurt Him.

In his prime a lady was reproaching Mr. William Warren, the Boston actor, for a well received for going into society so little. "You ought to let me lionize you a little," she said. "I never heard of a lioness," replied the veteran actor, "who was not spoiled by being lionized."

"And who was he?" "Daniel."

WEYMOUTH AGRICULTURE.

It is high time for the boys who want to win the Gazette and Transcript prizes at the coming fair of the Agricultural and Industrial Society to be getting in the seeds for their crops. See ad in this paper, $5.00-$5.00-$5.00.

Hay and Vegetables.
The hot days and nights which have come at last are bringing vegetation to front fast. A good crop of grass is in sight everywhere and can not be cut too soon. There is a prospect of home raised peas for the fourth of July in many places.

Thinning Fruit.
It is not a good indication, when leads of fruit trees are reported, to prove the loss of limbs. When a tree is thus over-loaded it is being compelled to do too much work. It will always pay to thin out the surplus fruit in the season. The remaining fruit on the tree will be better quality and a larger crop the result the succeeding year.

The Cow As a Machine.
As an illustration of efficiency of a good cow, as a machine for the manufacture of milk and butter from grain, the record of a given of a Holstein cow at the age of 3 years, which, during one year produced milk amounting to 18,573 pounds or over nine tons of milk, containing 650 pounds of butter, is not a record to be proud of.

A Corn Treat.
Almost a year ago it was stated in the Transcript that the corn crop in this section had been cultivated for the seventh time, and that the result would be watched with interest. The result was the finest corn crop in this section since the first crop of frequent cultivation of corn in nothing new, but the trouble is, the corn is not as good as it was.

The Gypsy Moth.
As most of our readers know, the gypsy moth will attack all fruit, shade and woodland trees, although it shows a preference for apple, white and red oak, willow and elm, says New England Homestead. It will devour on occasion nearly every species of grass, plant, flower, shrub, vine, bush, garden or field crop and kill both deciduous and coniferous trees.

Enslavement.
Is it proper to feed ensilage to poultry in winter? S. W. Philadelphia. Answer: Chickens will eat ensilage to a certain extent during the winter months, they love to scratch among it and eat a little, but waste more than they eat. Corn is not considered a valuable feed for poultry. When ensilage is recommended for fowls, the writers usually refer to that made from grass, clover, rye or other like green stuff.

Advertisements on Barns.
Every farmer should devote at least one evening to the discussion of the question of advertisements on barns and on large signboards in the fields through which highway trains pass. It is a hideous desecration of farm surroundings, and should not be permitted. Every farmer should resolve that no such advertising can be done on his buildings or premises—Exchange.

Selecting Milk Cows.
That one cow can be made to do the work of two has been found to be easily accomplished by the selection of the best individuals. A Vermont farmer, whose cows produced 100 pounds of butter each per year has succeeded in getting 200 pounds per year from each cow in his herd. Dairy men in other sections have done fully as well. It is claimed that if one cow gives as much as formerly did two, there is a saving in stable room, and more care. This can be accomplished, however, unless the cows are reared on the farm, or purchased from some breeder who makes a specialty of improved breeds. Feed, of course, is an important matter, also, but a good cow will give more product from the same ration than will an inferior cow that is fed in the same manner.

Getting Ahead of Weeds.
To contract this tendency, this certainly, the solar advice of another is in place: "Begin cultivation the next day after planting." When there are no weeds or the weeds are but a quarter of an inch high, the cultivation is a much lighter task than it is usually considered. The steel garden rake is an excellent implement for use by the hand. And when the rows are three or four feet apart there is a hand cultivator which does quick work. In the row with the plants a foot or so apart the work will be best. All this, if done at the right time, will be by no means a serious task. The main trouble comes from neglect and letting the weeds get a good start.

CARD OF THANKS.
To all who in any way helped to lighten our burden of sorrow during our recent bereavement, we desire to express our appreciation and extend our thanks.

Graduation Time.

"Beyond the Alps lies Italy."
"Through obstacles to stars."
"Give me death if not liberty."
"Can there be souls on Mars?"
Come, ye benighted mortals, come,
Start up to heights sublime,
By mortal means, being dumb—
This graduation time.

A gown of white, a mortar board,
A ribbon-gathered scroll,
That points up at the sky,
A high and lofty soul,
A bow, a gesture, and a hand
That points up at the sky,
"Shall I never rule this land?"
No! ! ! Echo makes reply.

Bring molly Shakespeare from his tomb,
And bid him to and fro,
Go follow Cranmer to his doom,
Still with Columbus when he went
Far from his native clime,
Go ransack prose and rhyme
For lofty thoughts and visions when
Is graduation time.

So now we pry into the depths
Of coward Brutus' heart,
Shed tears where sad Ophelia weeps,
And move with Iago apart;
Still with Columbus when he went
Far from his native clime,
Go ransack prose and rhyme
For lofty thoughts and visions when
Is graduation time.

And yet—and yet—I would I might Go back there and somehow
Add to my learning of that night
The knowledge I have now;
I would go forth so well equipped
That with a lofty shout
I'd have the demon Failure whipped
Before the week is out.

GATHERED UP.
Learn to avoid all ill-natured remarks and everything calculated to create friction.
It is not difficult to prove you are right from your own point of view.
Half an hour had temper comes through our inability to see the justice of the other side.

The average friendship is wrecked upon the fact that the average person's idea of friend is someone he can impose upon—Athenian Globe.
The Albany Times-Union says there is a period in every woman's life when she feels the superiority of her sex, and that is when she sees a man trying to thread a needle.

The twins were giggling after being out to bed, and their mother asked them why. "Because," said Edith, "you have given me two baths and Alice none at all London News.

A Tip to the Barbers.
"Mamma," said little Elsie, "do men ever go to heaven?"
"Why, of course, my dear. What makes you ask?"
"Because I never see any pictures of angels with whiskers."
"Well," said the mother, thoughtfully, "men do go to heaven, but they get there by a close shave."—San Francisco Monitor.

A Thorough Examination.
The Highway Commission has recently been given the real solution to the problem of what to put into effect its system of examinations for chauffeurs, and hereafter all candidates for professional operator licenses will have to pass satisfactory mental and a road test before they can receive a license. Its experience in examining candidates for licenses have shown that some of the students and graduates of so-called automobile schools are far from competent to drive.

Should Love Our Enemies.
A priest had labored hard with one of his flock to induce him to give up whiskey. "I tell you, Michael," said he, "you should keep it as far from you as you can."
"My dear man," said the priest, "I responded."
"And it was your riverance's self that was telling us to swallow them?"
"No! was, Michael," rejoined the priest, "but I didn't tell you to swallow them!"

All the Requisites.
Two young physicians were exchanging news for the first time since their graduation from the medical school, says the Boston Companion.
"I was surprised when I heard you'd settled at Beech Hill," said one to the other, laughing. "I've always heard it spoken of as such a healthy suburb. I wondered if you'd find any patients there."
"My dear man," said the other, earnestly, "it's a healthy suburb, but it is also the stronghold of football, every family has its automobile, and there never was such a place before for giving children parties. I'm doing splendidly, thank you."

Seeds Inside.
S. F. Hood of the department of agriculture is trying to beat the Japanese camellia trust by raising camellia groves in Florida. At a dinner in Hampton that celebrated an unusually dense distillation of camellia leaves, Mr. Hood, the guest of honor, told a seasonable agricultural story, a story that should appeal to all suburbanites.
"One beautiful spring morning," he began, "a suburbanite looked suspiciously over his hedge and said to his neighbor: 'Hey, what the fence are you burying in that hole there?'"

The neighbor laughed—a harsh, bitter laugh.

"O," he said, "I'm just replanting some of my nasturtium seeds, that's all."
"Nasturtium seeds?" shouted the man angrily. "It looks more like one of my Aunt Lillian's seeds!"
"Oh, that's all right," the other returned. "The seeds are inside!"—Buffalo Enquirer.

After Commencement.

Pounding out a tune
Waging life's great warfare,
Longest of girls,
May is in the hammock
To enjoy the warm weather,

Shoe Industry.
There has been a decided change in the complexion of footwear since the sun began to shine and the north winds ceased to blow, for with the advent of summer temperature the summer shoes came out and the winter shoes have been crowded the black leather articles back into the quiet of the closet. At the same time there has come a better feeling to the trade, though it is generally conceded that lost trade is never found. It is expected, however, that in a time between now and July 4 in putting out the white canvas goods, and already the demand for these shoes of the manufacturers and wholesalers is very large. Representative firms report sales of such size that they are predicting a business in sales continues at the crazy pitch, and the rage has been a good one to the trade, for it has proved brisk when the normal sales would have been discouraging. Haverhill manufacturers report that the demand on them is greater than they are able to meet. They have sold a great quantity, and, but they have been able to foresee the demand, would have been provided with more, but as it is they are still working on small lots for immediate delivery.

The fact that the season is growing is considered no drawback to business, for there is a general belief that this will be a good investment for weeks to come. Retailers will handle them to September, and, if the autumn pays the debts incurred by the spring, if they do well into October before these comfortable shoes will be discharged from duty. In fact, they have not been omitted in the selections for winter, so the line of decoration between the seasons is not so sharp as it was last year. So far salesmen are reporting a larger percentage of these goods in the fall and winter orders than was the case last year.

Fall and winter business is in a very satisfactory condition, salesmen on some routes report it was ahead of last season. Those still on the road will probably reap the benefit of the warm weather business, for buyers are cheerful and though they have good stocks of reasonable goods, they are giving satisfactory orders for the future that indicate a confidence which is certain to beget business. Trips in the South and West have proved more encouraging than in other sections, for there everyone seems to have money, and is able to pay bills, while in the North and East collections have been more difficult on account of the backward season which has affected seriously so many lines of business.

The month of July will lead a large number of buyers visiting Boston, and they have sent the information ahead that they intend to make purchases—Boston Transcript.

Watch Your Words.
Keep a watch on your words, my darlings.
For words are wonderful things;
They are sweet like bees' fresh honey—
Like the bees they have terrible stings.
They can bless like the warm glad sunshine,
And brighten a lonely life.
They can cut in the strife of anger,
Like an open, two-edged knife.
Let them pass through your lips unchained,
If their errand is true and kind—
If they come to support the weary,
To cheer and help the blind;
If a bitter, revengeful spirit
Prompt the words let them be said.
They may pass through a brain like lightning,
Or fall on a heart like lead.
Keep them back if they're cold and cruel
Under hard, and look, and seal;
The words they make my darlings,
Are always slow to heal.
May peace guard your lives, and ever,
From the time of your early youth,
May the words that you daily utter
Be the words of beautiful truth.

RETURNED AT THE POST OFFICE AT WEYMOUTH, MASS., AS SECOND-CLASS MATTER.

FRIDAY, JUNE 28, 1907.

We will join the multitude next Thursday in celebrating, which means a day off. Correspondents and advertisers will please help us out by giving us early copy.

Thomas W. Lawson is home from his European trip and unless he has materially changed during his foreign travels, he will be something doing as soon as he gets his "land legs" on.

The state tax for the current year is a little over $1,000,000 of which Weymouth will be called upon to pay $5,450, about 15 percent more than last year, which will add about 20 cents per thousand to our tax rate.

At the time of writing, it looks as though a (not) the merger bill will have received the Governor's signature before night, and the great and general court will adjourn for the season. Alterations and amendments have been so numerous that no one can claim that it is his bill, but we can all hope that the "merger" will be a good one. In fact, as a rule, the more merging there has been in transportation the better and cheaper has been the service rendered. We recollect distinctly when we had but two or three trains a day to Boston and paid 50 cents for the trip, but can now go almost any hour of the day and for a third of what we paid before merging began.

The 17th of June, or Bunker Hill day, was celebrated only two weeks ago, and it was a record breaker for major and minor casualties, the number of killed and wounded being far in excess of any previous year's celebration. We have already begun the celebration of the next great event in American history and indications are that the lid will be lifted long before daylight next Thursday morning. The day is worth celebrating, but we put a little sense in our jollification and be as careful as we can in the use of "fire water" and other explosives. Weymouth's hospital has not materialized as yet and let us not make hospitals of our homes by a reckless use of dangerous material.

Next to our own High school, the people of Weymouth should be proud of the Worcester High which is the head of Boston schools with a membership of over 1,200 pupils and a graduating class of over 275. Our reason for pride is that four leading teachers are sons and daughters of Weymouth and graduates of the Weymouth High school, viz., Charles J. Lincoln, principal; Joseph Hawes, mathematics and mechanical drawing; Louise Humphrey, German language; and Mary Humphrey, English and French. In addition to these, other graduates of the Weymouth High school, viz., John J. Lounsbury, who was selected as orator of the day and chose as his subject "The Relation of the Schools to Good Citizenship."

Rear Admiral John W. Weeks.

The Boston Globe of June 11 says: It is now Rear Admiral John W. Weeks, having been placed on the retirement list of the naval militia of the state of Massachusetts with that rank by general orders No. 11, which reads as follows:

"The retirement of the following named commissioned officer, to April, 1908, as captain, is hereby rescinded, his retirement certificate recalled, and he is placed on the retired list of the Massachusetts volunteer militia with the rank of rear admiral, under the provisions of chapter 210, acts of 1906, amending chapter 210, acts of 1904—Capt. John W. Weeks, naval brigade—date April 10, 1907."

John W. Weeks, ex-governor of Newton, and at present congressman from the 12th district, commanded the Massachusetts naval brigade and brought it up to high efficiency before the Spanish war. He is a New Hampshire product of good old colonial stock, became a school teacher at 16 and entered the U. S. naval academy in 1877, being graduated in 1881. He served on the USS Foxhatch and later on the steamship Richmond, the flagship at the time of the Asiatic station. He left the regular naval service in 1883 to engage in business, but was on hand when the call went for '98, and commanded until 1906, when he was retired at his own request, being succeeded by Capt. Huntington of Fall River. In 1896 he was appointed by President Cleveland a member of the board of visitors to the U. S. naval academy—Newton Graphic.

McCarthy-Delory.

Among the very pretty closing weddings of the "month of roses" was one celebrated at the parochial residence in East Weymouth, Wednesday evening, the 26th, the contracting parties being John McCarthy and Miss Helen Sophia Delory, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Andrew Delory, all of East Weymouth. Rev. Fr. Allison performed the marriage ceremony.

The bride's gown was white, messaline with chintilly lace; she wore a picture hat with white plume, a gold watch, locket and chain studded with large diamonds, and carried pearl prayer beads.

Miss Emma F. McCarthy, sister of the groom, was maid of honor and wore a pink crepe de chene with messaline trimmings, a picture hat with pink plumes, and carried a bouquet of pink roses. John V. Cramer of Ayon was best man.

A reception at the new home of the newly-wedded couple, 25 Middle street, followed the marriage ceremony, and a large number of guests were received from the hotel and other places. The bride and groom were assisted in the reception by Misses Emma and Jane McCarthy, Mrs. Andrew Delory and Mr. John Cramer.

The ushers were Miss Frances Alley of Woodville and Miss Fannie Tabbot of Quincy. Dr. Frank Fitzgerald of Somerville and Joseph T. Smith of East Weymouth.

The Forest Service.

"Forest Service" has been the name since July 1, 1905, of that branch of the Department of Agriculture which was previously called the "Bureau of Forestry," and, earlier still, the "Division of Forestry."

Since February 1, 1903, the Forest Service has been charged, under the direction of the Secretary of Agriculture, with the administration of the National Forests. About the management of the National Forests, therefore, the work of the Service now centers. The Forests, whose area April 1, 1907, was 147,000,000 acres, are of vital importance for their timber and grass and for the conservation of stream flow. They are so managed as to develop their permanent value as a resource by use. Earlier opposition toward them, based on the belief that preservation would prevent use, has changed with the understanding of their real object to approval and support. The last valid objections to their establishment and maintenance have been removed from the mind of the public. The law of June 11, 1906, and by a clause in the agricultural appropriation act for the year 1906-7. By the first, agricultural land in National Forests, if classified as chiefly valuable for agriculture, is to be sold to the owner, and the land so sold is to be withdrawn from the National Forests. The second clause provides that the Secretary of the Interior may be taken up by home builders. Many small tracts of agricultural lands, scattered here and there along creeks and valleys, have invariably been included within Forest boundaries, though the utmost care secured the elimination of all large bodies of such land when the boundaries were drawn. The need of such a law as that of June 11 was clearly seen, and its passage was secured.
